REFLECTION

For what can be known about God is perfectly plain, for God has made it plain. Ever since God created the world, God's everlasting power and deity is there for the mind to see in all the things that God has created." (-Romans 1:20) This amazing, yet all too often ignored, passage says the essential message is written everywhere for all to see, if they indeed want to see. Both Anthony of the Desert (c. 251-356) and Thomas Aquinas (1224-1274) said there are two books of scripture. The first book of scripture is the natural world, which has existed since the Big Bang 14 billion years ago. The second book of scripture is the written Bible, which has only existed for about 2,000 years. We basically threw out the first book for much of the last 2,000 years, although it got worse after the invention of the printing press. We gave most of our attention to the written book, which has kept us in our limited left brain, outside of direct experience, and with the dualistic mind that the ego always prefers. Mere words, even and most especially "holy words" and authoritative words, when used apart from any experience of an Eternal Word, tend to create argumentative people. The small self loves to use whatever words it needs for purposes of self-protection and self-promotion. The Great Self allows One Eternal Word to override all such tactics because it lives in a much larger field of meaning. Words are often two to three steps removed from true experience. Many have said that a fundamental attitude of awe is the primal religious experience and the beginning of the search for God. If we start with mere argument we never leave that battlefield. Imagine a religion called "Aweism"! Instead of wasting time trying to disprove miracles, this religion would be inhabited by people who see that everything is a miracle. Only people who can fully surrender to things beyond themselves can experience awe, wonder, or enchantment.
